

ABSTRACT

A retainer assembly for maintaining the position of a manifold in a tank includes a seat configured for attachment adjacent an end of the manifold. A retainer base is configured for engaging the seat, which retains the base relative to the manifold. At least one retaining protrusion is securable to the base for 5 movement between a first, retracted position and a second, extended position.